Course Summary

Interested in a career where you can make a real difference in people's lives? The Access to Higher Education Diploma in Health and Social Care is your stepping stone to university and a wide range of rewarding roles in the health and social care sector.

This one-year course is designed for adults aged 19 and over who are looking to progress into higher education and pursue careers in areas such as mental health, social work, community support, or healthcare services. It's an ideal option if you're considering nursing or social care, but prefer a pathway that places less emphasis on science and more on people, society, and real-world challenges.

You'll explore topics that reflect the broader context of today's care landscape – including the impact of knife crime, social inequality, and mental health on individuals and communities. The course includes an enhanced focus on psychology to support your understanding of behaviour and wellbeing across different settings.

What You Will Learn

Throughout this course, you'll build the academic, digital, and professional skills needed to succeed at university and in a career within the health and social care sector. As well as gaining knowledge in areas such as sociology, psychology, and healthcare systems, you will also develop key transferable skills that are essential for higher education and the workplace. You will learn how to:

- Conduct independent research and analyse information critically
- Use Harvard referencing accurately in essays and assignments
- Apply critical thinking and evaluative skills to real-world health and social care issues
- Use word processing software effectively, including advanced features like footnotes and formatting for academic work
- Manage your time and workload, developing resilience and the ability to balance study with everyday responsibilities
- Navigate digital learning platforms and make full use of online resources, including the college's virtual learning environment and digital library
- Solve problems and propose practical solutions, preparing you for challenges in both academic and professional settings
