For Eliza Ellis-Hyman

Eliza is a dynamic force in the intersection of psychology, technology, and education. With a Master's in Psychology, her journey from a strategic sales director at Beeline, a forefront tech company in workforce solutions at the age of 26, to a visionary company director at Aim A Little Higher has been nothing short of remarkable. At Aim A Little Higher, Eliza helps bridge the often daunting gap between education and the professional world, making significant strides towards a more integrated and accessible future for learners and workers alike.

As a mother, she brings the same passion and dedication to her family, balancing professional ambitions with personal fulfillment. Join us to hear Eliza share her insights, experiences, and the powerful lessons she's learned along her journey from the world of high-stakes tech sales to the heart of educational reform.
